Republican Senatorial Convention

A Republican Senatorial Convention of the Seventeenth Senatorial District, comprising the county of Rock, is hereby called to meet at the Court House, in the city of Janesville, in said county, on Wednesday, the 6th day of September, 1882, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to nominate a candidate for State Senator for said Senatorial District, and to transact any other business that may be deemed appropriate. Each town and ward will be entitled to the same number of delegates as in the last County Convention to nominate county officers.

Dated August 14, 1882.

JOHN R. BENNETT,
S. T. MERRILL,
I. M. BENNETT,
S. S. NORTHROP,
WM. H. TRIPP,
Committee.

The funeral of Senator Ben Hill took place on Saturday, at Atlanta, and was witnessed by 20,000 people.

The income of the United States during the past year was $150,000,000. Uncle Sam is still ahead of Vanderbilt.

One of the hottest campaigns which will be fought this canvass will be that in Ohio. The Republicans are thoroughly aroused there, and those who think the Democrats are going to carry the State, are not sound on the politics of Ohio.

It will require some level-headed work over in the Third District to keep the Republican majority there right side up. There are several factions in that district, and what work is done should be wisely and thoroughly done, that defeat may not overtake the party.

General Stoneman, the Democratic candidate for Governor of California, made all California laugh the other day when he began a political speech by saying: "Fellow-citizens: It is a well-known fact in history that great generals are poor talkers, and I am one of them."

With the close of last week there were in the treasury vaults at Washington, ninety millions of new silver dollars lying idle, and $20,000,000 in fractional silver currency, making a total of $110,000,000 in silver coin on hand. Silver dollars increase at the rate of $3,000,000 each month, $2,000,000 of which goes into the vaults. When the government has more silver on hand than it can use, or likely will use for several years, it is time to make a halt in the coinage.

There is a powerful sentiment being worked up in many states against the action of the brewers, demanding that there be free beer and a Sunday of revelry instead of one of order and peace. The bitterness with which the brewers' associations are fighting the temperance movement is apt to work harm to the brewers, and bring about that state of things which they least desire. Especially at this time is the advise, "don't munky with the buzz saw," applicable. It won't do to fool with the people just now. They mean business, and the closer the brewers press the issue the greater will be their surprise and disappointment.

A dispatch from Racine to the Sunday Telegraph says, "the Prohibitionists of the First Congressional district will probably put a candidate in the field. The prohibition vote in the district last fall was, Rock, 630; Walworth, 311; Racine, 259; Kenosha, 45; total—1,245. Among those most prominently mentioned are W. T. Lewis, who made such a good run in this city last spring, and Judge E. O. Hand, also of this city. Judge Hand has been a Democrat since 1872, having Greeleyized. He is also a strong temperance man. If he accepts the nomination it will be with the understanding that the Democrats will also make him their candidate. Should a new man be placed in the field there are a great many temperance people who will support Mr. Williams because he is thoroughly temperate as any man they can name, and is also in favor of submitting the prohibition question to the people."

The Democrats are joining the George William Curtis crowd in clamoring for civil service reform, and are running this question in the ground. There is hardly a greater humbug in this country (except the Democratic party) than the civil service theories of Curtis and his followers. It has been tried, and as often as it has been put to the test it has failed. The best civil service system that could positively be established is that suggested in the speech delivered by Congressman Williams, at Geneva Lake, when he accepted a renomination. If a man's moral character is entitled to respect, then the great question should be—not what he knows—but what can he do. There is probably as much truth as humor in the remark Mr. Williams made, that the civil service questions propounded to the members of Congress would leave the House of Representatives without a quorum. And this is no reflection on the members of the House. There is hardly one in that body who is not a man of education in the proper sense of the term, and who has not been more or less successful in business and most of them are excellent public speakers and men of influence, and yet it is not likely that one in five could take the questions framed by the civil service commission of 1860-70, and give correct answers to them. Some of the recent graduates from the Janesville high school could answer questions in mathematics, history, geography, and grammar, which would confound most members of Congress as well as all the great business men of this country; but that does not disqualify men from sitting in Congress neither does it check the strides the Goulds, the Keenes, the Villards, the Vanderbilts, and the Mitchells are making in business. Under the government the rule should be to employ men and women whose qualification is based on what they can do and not what they know. When this is done a very important step will have been taken to reform the civil service.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

NEWPORT, Aug. 20.—The expected arrival of President Arthur on Tuesday has caused quite a flutter of excitment here among the cottagers, many of whom expect to "gobble him," socially speaking, but they will be disappointed. He has already declined to be entertained at an old fashioned Rhode Island clambrake at which a large number of distinguished citizens had hoped to entertain him. It was proposed to take him to Coasters' Harbor Island, and it was thought that would be very appropriate in view of the fact that the Congress of the United States has just accepted it as a naval training station. Ex-Governor Morgan will entertain the President, however, at what promises to be the largest and most magnificent reception ever held here. The President is to arrive Tuesday evening by the 8 o'clock train, and that night he will be quietly housed by New York's ex-governor. He will no doubt accept some private invitations; in fact it is given out already that he will dine with Mr. John Jacob Astor and Mr. C. Vanderbilt. The President will remain here a week.

A CIRCUS SMASH.

CAIRO, Aug. 20—W. C. Coup's circus left here at 4 o'clock this morning in two sections. When between Tunnel Hill and New Burnside, about forty-seven miles north of this city, the engine of the second section ran into a passenger coach on the rear of the freight train, completely demolishing the coach and killing three of the drivers, and wounding twenty-five or thirty others. They were going down grade from Tunnel Hill, and, the first section being heavily loaded, while the latter section was rather light, the second train was running fast at the time of the accident. The stock and cars ahead of the coach in the first section and in rear of the engine in the second section escaped unhurt. Relief trains, with physicians, etc., were sent to the scene of the wreck at once.

A JEALOUS HUSBAND.

WARREN, Ill., Aug. 20—An attempted murder and probable successful suicide occurred just after noon near this place to day. James Bird, a cooper, living in this city went to the residence of Rufus Welty, living in the township of Gratiot, Wis., where his wife was visiting a sister. He called for his wife, and, after talking with her for a few minutes, telling her that if they could not live together happily they ought at least to be friends, he drew a revolver and attempted to shoot her through the head. The bullet entered the left side of neck without severing an artery, and lodged under the shoulder. Bird fired a second shot, the bullet striking her in the left wrist, and lodging in the muscle of the arm above the elbow. Bird then jumped over a fence, and as he struck the ground fired a shot at his heart, but the bullet passed over his left shoulder and through a fence board. He then lowered the pistol and fired a shot into his abdomen, the bullet entering about the fifth rib, a little to the right of the center, deflected downward and passed into the abdomen lodging in the left side of his back. Bird will probably die, but his wife has a fair chance for recovery.

A HORRIBLE TRAGEDY.

BLOOMINGTON, Aug. 20.—A special from Mount Pulaski, Logan County, says: "Charles McMahon, who lived five miles east of the city, and who had been missing for the past three days, was discovered this morning, with two young men who have been working for him, all three blindfolded and their throat cut from ear to ear."

TIRED OF LIFE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 20—At a late hour last night a splash was heard in the river, and it was heard that somebody was drowned. Search failed to prove the truth of the report by the finding of anybody in the water. To-day the fact came out that last night George Gasenheimer, connected with the Schlitz Brewery, gave to a friend several valuables, certificates of deposit, etc., requesting that they be turned over to his relatives, and stating that they would never see him again. The supposition now is that the splash in the river was caused by Gasenheimer jumping in and drowning himself.

BURGLARY.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 20.—Some time last night burglars entered Northrop's hat and furnishing store, on Wisconsin street, and carried therefrom several hundred dollars worth of silk goods, handkerchiefs, cheap jewelry, etc. The work appears to be that of some one acquainted with the premises.

A Trip Into the Rocky Mountains.

NUMBER EIGHT.

The descent from the east by the Santa Fe railroad into the valley of the Rio Grande is a delightful change. The eye has become weary in looking at the arid slopes, the dark gray heights, the stunted evergreen trees, and dark alkali bed of the Galestoe river, down whose side we have rapidly sped along. The first view of the noble stream which we are approaching has the effect of a surprise. Its banks are full of swift-running water, and are lined in many places with large cottonwood and willow trees, which at the time were clothed with a fresh and light green foliage. It appears to stretch far away towards its source into high mountain ranges, which lie in the indistinct northern horizon. The wide, trough-like valley sweeps up on the right and left, several miles, into the foot-hills, which rise here and there as regular low mountain peaks. The evidences of careful cultivation of the rich aluvial soil along the river are observed at once. The large ditches conveying the turbid waters, run back into the plowed fields, orchards, and vineyards; and from these, smaller ones extend diagonally toward the Rio Grande by means of which the land is thoroughly irrigated. Many sheep, cattle, burros, and horses, attended by Indian or Mexican herders, are feeding in the unfenced pastures, here covered with green grass, and there with the thinly scattered brown herbage of last year. The ride down the stream, for at least three hours, is most of the way in the midst of similar scenes.

Interest was added to the journey by the near view of several Indian pueblos in this valley. It is known that these have existed for at least three hundred years. In each one is an old Catholic church constructed of a dobe brick on the model of the ruined cathedral at Pecos. The large square dwelling houses are one to three stories in height, and have a light gray color. They are usually built as irregular rows of continuous structures, and their flat roofs are reached by ladders placed outside, the feet of which rest in the streets or open courts. The dusky forms of the blanketed inhabitants, with a heavy band or handkerchief tied around the head, and standing like a statue on the tops of those roofs, and gazing intently at you, make a picturesque sight, which remains in the memory for months as a most distinct impression. The first pueblo is Santo Domingo, some of whose members are seen at a neighboring station, selling rough or spurious pieces of the torquoise mineral and a coarse variety of pottery. Over the Rio Grande, the village has continued a long and curiously designed bridge of stakes and logs. San Felipe is the next pueblo, situated on the banks of the river. The buildings are erected very compactly together under the brow of a high bluff, and have a very neat white appearance. Close by are the stone ruins of the ancient town of Cia, which was built on quite a high eminence overlooking the river. Farther down the stream is the flourishing Pueblo of Isleta, around which are finely cultivated fields and vineyards. To the west of this place a few miles is Laguna, located on a low ledge of rocks, and governed by a former resident of the city of Madison in this State. The people are industrious and thrifty, Protestant in their religious faith, and have well ordered homes. Among this groupe of Indian Pueblo, and a little distance from the railroad, is Acoma, built on a rocky cliff, with precipitous sides over three hundred feet high. It is a very beautiful village.

The route southward along the Red Grande is through the Mexican towns of Bernalillo, where excellent wine is manufactured, and Albuquerque, which is composed of two large villages, one an enterprising railroad center, with many modern houses, and the other a mile and a half away, with dingy looking mud-wall buildings. The places are connected by a horse railway. This city controls the immense sheep-growing interests of the surrounding country, and is a distributing point for many mines in the Territory. It literally abounds in all quarters with public resorts for drinking, gambling, and unblushing lewdness.

At this point I met Mr. Will A. Harvey, a young man from the town of Fulton, Rock county, this State, who accompanied me for nearly a week in a most delightful journey into Arizona and western New Mexico. Being thoroughly acquainted with all the prominent places on the line of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad from the Rio Grande to the Great Colorado river, he was a most useful companion and guide. I found him holding the responsible position of Material Agent of this road, with his office at Coolidge, New Mexico. Of the many ambitious youngerly men from Wisconsin, no one has outstripped him in speedy promotion and excellent service. Two years ago last spring he closed a public school in our county, to be employed on this road as flagman, the lowest position in the surveying party who were selecting the route among the mesas, mountain ranges, and deep canons to the west. He rose from place to place in this branch of labor, and was finally chosen to take the charge of the materials used in the building of the station houses, the many bridges, and the bed of the road, which is rapidly pushed for six hundred miles toward Southern California. At the time of our trip together he was holding under his care a million and a half of railroad property. He often supervised the work of seventy-five hands, who made their daily reports to him. This splendid success has been won wholly unassisted and by the pure merit which attends absolute correctness in business transactions, and an impeachable character.

Like the Santa Fe road, the Atlantic and Pacific is constructed in the most substantial manner. The train glides along without any jarring or racking of the cars over a marvelously solid track. The greatest obstacle encountered is the occasional wash-out of the road along the beds of the dry streams in the wet season late in the summer. Extensive and costly provisions are introduced to obviate this trouble. When completed this route to California will be the most popular to the Pacific Coast. It avoids the dreary snow storms of the Central Pacific, and the intolerable heat of the Southern Pacific, and passes through the most peculiar and most magnificent scenery in all the Rocky Mountains. My journey over this line for nearly three hundred miles and return must be described in another article.

How Men Become Insane.

A large number of lunatics in our asylums are the victims of their own misconduct. Almost any person can make himself a lunatic if he pursues the direct method. There are hundreds and perhaps thousands in this city driving themselves to madness. Gambling, speculation and hard drinking will undermine the strongest intellects. A young man of my acquaintance has lately been sent to Bloomingdale Asylum who was, a few years ago, so promising as to obtain an important appointment. He abused his position, wasted a large salary, became suddenly a gambler and a rake as well as a defaulter.

The same idea is advanced by Hogarth, who finishes the "Rake's Progress" by the scene in the mad-house. During the last five years large numbers have been carried to the asylum, the victims of speculation. The love of pleasure and the haste to get rich have done a fearful work. After the intellect has been over-driven it must sink and perhaps remain in hopeless prostration. It may be added that the increase of insanity since the opening of the present year is of unparalleled degree. More than 500 cases have been reported during this brief interval, and hence it is not surprising that the asylums are more than full. The attention of the public has been called to this subject by the press, and additional room must be provided. We must either abate that furious intemperance which is driving so many to madness, or we must double our asylums all through the State.—Troy Times.

The Incisors of the Horse.

The incisors of the horse, once worn down or lost, are gone forever, but in many species a provision exists by which the wear and tear of mastication is compensated by the perpetual growth of certain members of the dental series. This very convenient arrangement exists in all the rodents, or gnawers, an order of which the beaver, the rat and the rabbit are familiar examples, and also in the elephant, the walrus, wild boar, etc. The incisors of the rodents are the seat of this perpetual growth, and any one who will take the trouble to examine the skull of a rabbit will at once see how admirably they are adapted to the animal wants. They are of curved shape, and occupy sockets extending to the back part of both jaws, the upper pair describing a larger part of a smaller circle, and the lower ones a smaller part of a larger circle. Each tooth consists of a solid column of dentine, with a plate of enamel in its outer surface, and, consequently, diminishes in hardness from front to back. The constant wear produced by the continual collision of the opposing surfaces forms an oblique chisel-like surface, sloping from the hard enamel of the front to the softer dentine of the back part of the tooth. As these teeth are perpetually growing, they require constant exercise to keep their growth within due bounds, and the rat and others of this most mischievous family might assign, as an excuse for their ravages, the necessity of finding constant employment for their front teeth.—All the Year Round.

A Conductor's Printing Office.

It appears that German railway conductors are made happy by the addition to their equipment of a paper-mill and printing office, the invention of a Berlin engineer, to be hung around the neck, which, according to an exchange, is to completely manufacture passenger tickets before the eyes of the wondering public. The apparatus is said to be somewhat complicated in construction, but its manipulation is as simple as its working is correct, for, should the operator not proceed in the way required by the mechanism, it will not print all the figures and words wanted, but the word "Falsch" (wrong) in the place where the fault was committed. At the same time this portable printer checks the number of tickets issued, so that at any given moment the money in the hands of the conductor can be compared with the value of the tickets printed and taken.

MR. ALCOTT told the Concord Summer School of Philosophers that "Actuality is the Thingness of the Here." The information almost paralyzed them. For years they had been laboring under the misapprehension that the hereness of the actuality is the thing. But it is no such thing.—Norristown Herald.

ACCORDING to Bottger, copper and brass can be easily coated with zinc by immersing them in a boiling bath of sal ammoniac containing zinc foil or powder. The deposit of zinc made in this way is brilliant, and adheres firmly to the copper and brass.

A FLORIDA MADRIGAL.

'Tis the song of a Seminole maiden,
On the banks of the Hatchemahe,
Awaiting her lover, game laden,
Who has gone to the Istokpoga.

"Oh, why do-st thou stay, Tustenuggo,
My love: from the Hickpochee?
And hast thou no fear of Micanopy,
Thy rival from Withlacoochee?

"Or others who gather around me,
Dusky heroes of chase and of war?
Oh, my love, hasten up the Kissimmee,
And together we'll wander afar.

"We'll go to the Pithlachesteentee,
Seek hammocks on fair Wacassassa,
Ascend to its head Chattahoochee,
Land on Sanibel, off Pinata Bassa;

"Float swiftly down Caloosahatchie,
Escaping from Okeechobee,
To the land of Halpatuhtchie,
And prairies of salt Manatee;

"Dream dreams on Tahopekaliga,
Sing songs upon old Suwannee,
Skim the surface of Woyo Jokalpa,
Tuskawilla, and Okeechumkee,

"Wakulla, Wekiva, Homosassa,
Cheshowiska, and Ocklawaha,
The famous Lake Iehebucksassa,
And yellow Apalachicola;

"From Okeefinoke to Ocklockanee,
From Tallahassee down to the sea,
Away from all scenes that might shock thee,
We'll float o'er smooth Apalachee;

"By the Tsala Apopka we'll roam,
He to haunts of the sweet alligator;
In the Southland we'll find us a home,
Breathe the breath of the torrid equator."

But, absorbed by the love of Wyomi,
Stock Icke, and fat Peonamiva,
He heeded not fair Micanopy,
Nor again came to Hatchemaha.

MISS MATILDA JANE AND THE MINISTER.

Bramleigh is a sleepy-looking town. The village street is draped with drowsily-drooping elms. The sea is just far enough away to whisper as sleepily as the wind in the leaves. Few people are abroad in daytime. The birds alight and sing on the mossy town-pump. The church, which is so white that it makes one wink to gaze upon it, sits in the midst of an ancient burying ground, and calls the people of a Sunday morning with the sleepiest bell possible. Daisies and buttercups nod in the path which leads to the door of the town-hall, and an adventurous tramp of a clematis creeps out of a neighboring meadow and looks in at the windows, trailing its white blossoms over the sill. The green blinds of the ancient white houses are all closed along the street, and in the tall grass which fills the shaded front yards grow a few sleepy-looking flowers, such as lilies of the valley, gray and crimson poppies, "old maids' pinks," and great clumps of silvery-green "life-forever."

When the clock strikes nine the whole world prepares for bed, and if a light is seen glimmering from one of the windows for more than half an hour after that time it is safe to conclude that either some one is ill in the house or some one has a beau in an advanced stage of courtship. Still, a long sojourn in Bramleigh teaches one that it is never by any means as sleepy as it seems,—that every shut-up, drowsy-looking old building has wide-awake eyes and ears on every side, and that even the lank-haired, drawling juvenile is on the alert for a happening.

My landlady, Mrs. Bragdon, lives a mile away from the village, but nearly every whisper which is breathed there finds its way to the farm,—the thrilling news that Mis' Peter Talpey is going to have her sitting-room newly papered; that the minister bought his new coat up to Boston, that John Snow went home with Lucy White from the last evening meeting, and the still more thrilling news that Mis' Oliver Norton and Mis' Lemuel Stacy have fallen out and do not speak to each other. Mrs. Bragdon declares that she shall not sleep a wink until she hears whether they are pleased again or not. As she expresses it, "She does like to have something going on." And when last fall all her summer boarders had taken flight with the exception of myself, the cows had all been sold but two, and the light harvest was being gathered in with the assistance of but two hired men, she declared that she had too much spare time and was blue as a whetstun—that the village was duller than nothin' at all; she was never so put to it for news in her life.

"Spare time hain't what ails me," grumbled Alfonso, the tow-headed son of the house. "I ken't git a minute ter set in the store; that's why you don't hear no news."

"Cat's-foot! you don't git no news when you do go to the corner evenin's. You don't set in the store, noway. You jest dangle round Cyrus Parker's gate, to see if you ken't git a glimpse of Mirandy. But, Lor'! if you ken find out anything that's a-goin' on in the world, you might ez well go down along ter-night. There'll be pumpkins to cut evenin's by 'n' by, 'n' there won't be no gittin' off then."

So, making himself very brilliant as to his feet and very much perfumed as to his head, Alfonso sets off down the road as soon as his evening chores are accomplished. The light of his lantern flashes from between the branches of the trees, and we hear him singing in a very jolly and confident strain, as he disappears round the corner, "He'll carry you through."

"Well, I dun'no as I shell be kerried through et that boy don't bring no word of enybody or enything," says his mother, seating herself by the fire with her knitting work.

There is a frosty tingle in the air, and the scarlet glow of the open fire is exceedingly grateful to the senses. The hired girl and the hired man are courting in the kitchen. Pussy-cat washes her face on the hearth-rug. The crickets are piping pensively under the floor. I am absorbed in the fortunes of Captain Fracasse—just the witching, wonderful sort of story to read by the firelight of a long evening—and Mrs. Bragdon, who likes company, looks miserable to the last degree.

I look up, and, catching a glimpse of her woe-begone face, am touched with real pity. I know with what delight I may fill her soul if I choose to reveal a secret which I have piously concealed since my first year's sojourn in Bramleigh—a delectable tale, which, for a wonder, has not been whispered around the hearth-sides of the village nor discussed under the "dim, religious light" of the one lantern which hangs from the dusty rafters in the store.

I put aside my book, and say rashly, before I have really decided to tell: "Mrs. Bragdon, did you ever know what broke off the engagement between Miss Matilda Jane Snow and the minister?"

The sudden brightening of Mrs. Bragdon's face is something amazing. She drops her knitting work at once and clasps her hands in a touching attitude of expectation. "No; I couldn't never find out for certain. Everybody thought 'twas proper strange, after they'd been goin' together for so long. Marshy, the girl that used to work over to the Snows', told me that they set up together a good many nights, 'n' he used ter bring her peppermints and religious books with his 'n' her names writ in 'em. But, Lor'! Matildy Jane hez always bin hevin' a beau, ever sence she left off pantalettes. Once 'twas the schoolmaster that come from over Bonny Big way. Folks said they was a-goin' to git married right away, 'n' then he disappeared like a thief in the night, 'n' weren't never seen in these parts eny more. Nobody knew jest why that didn't come to nothin' but I heard that Matildy Jane said (you know she's a real native professor) that she shouldn't feel herself justified in hevin' a man that didn't enjoy gospel privileges no more'n he did. Then 'twas Deacon Thompson, when he was a widderer. He used to go over 'n' sing hymns with Matildy Jane 'most every evenin', 'n' she baked up a lot o' plum-cake 'n' cup-custards 'n' invited him over to take tea, 'n' was partial to his little girl July in her Sunday-school class, 'n' he took her to ride over to Sandy P'int grave-yard, where his fust wife was buried. But that didn't come to nothin' neither. They were both ov 'em tempery, 'n' fell out about suthin'. Matildy Jane hain't no beauty, but she's a good housekeeper, 'n' a fust-rate good woman, though she may be a trifle sot. All the Snows is sot. I know 'em root 'n' branch, 'n' of they kon't hev their own way they're dretful liable to fire up. This slick-lookin' minister, Parson Whitcomb, wanted her fur her money, they say. He was younger'n she, 'n' a picter of a man, with red cheeks 'n' curly hair. But, Lor'! she hain't got much money; she let that good-fur-nothin' brother ov hers waste a good pile that belonged to her on his eddication. He was a lazy soul, but was called, as he said, to be a missionary; 'n' of he kin make himself agreeable to the heathen, I 'spose it's as well as he could do. His room's better'n his company here." Mrs. Bragdon pauses quite out of breath, and regards me with earnest appeal.

"I can tell you why she didn't marry the minister," say I, with the true air of profound mystery and deep importance which is characteristic of the real Bramleigh gossip.

She gives a great start, removes the spectacles from her well-polished forehead, draws her chair several inches nearer my own, allows the cat to play with the ball of knitting-work with the most reckless indifference, and exclaims, "You don't say!" in a tone of mingled suspense and rapture.

Whereupon, after the usual preliminaries, the exhortation to eternal secrecy, the hesitations and deliberations which, somehow, seems to heighten the enjoyment of the expectant listener, I begin my tale:

"The first year I visited Bramleigh, I used to go and see Miss Matilda Jane very often, you know. I went past her house on my way to Morrill's meadow, where the orchids grow, and, stopping at the gate to admire her flowers one day, she came out and presented me with a lovely little bouquet of spice-pinks and lavender. Then, one day when I was heated with my long walk, she invited me into the house to have a glass of her raspberry-shrub, and I accepted the invitation with pleasure, for it looked very cool and inviting inside the wide, breezy old hall.

"'Good gracious!' said Miss Matilda Jane, 'I shouldn't never get my breath again if I walked as far as Morrill's meadow. I wish you'd always drop in here 'n' rest awhile whenever you take a walk in this direction. I see so few strangers that my eyes fairly ache for the sight o' one, and, when I have time to be, I'm dreadfully lonesome.'

"So I sat with her some time, trying to make myself agreeable; but, as the lady is not a little deaf, and I was not aware of it at the time, we did not get on very well at first."

"Deef as a post—deef as the backside o' the meetin'-house o' week-days," assents my listener, warmly.

"But I called again and again, and after a while we became very good friends. I liked the quaint old house, with its large, low-ceiled rooms, the huge fireplace filled with evergreen boughs, the old-fashioned furniture and ornaments brought from over sea by sailor-relatives, the house-plants in the wide window-seats, and the scriptural titles in the chimney-piece. Then the Manx cat and the parrot were sources of unfailing amusement."

"Didn't you never see the parson—Matilda Jane's beau—when you was there?" asked Mrs. Bragdon, breathlessly impatient for the denouement of the story.

"Why, yes; I'm coming to that presently," say I, with wicked deliberation, as I stroke the back of the tortoise-shell cat, who has seated herself in my lap and is basking delightedly in the warm glow of the fire.

"Her father, old Cap'n John, didn't take no farney to him at fust—so I didn't know as he come to the house much in them days; that's all," she apologizes, becoming sufficiently composed to pick up her knitting-work.

"Not long before I left Bramleigh that fall, one bright, frosty afternoon I went over to the Snow woods on an autumn-leaf expedition, and called to see Miss Matilda Jane, as usual, on my way home. But finding the minister, Mr. Whitcomb, seated in very close proximity to his lady-love, I thought it best to make my excuses and take an immediate departure.

"'No, indeed; you mustn't think of going,' said she, with energetic decision. 'You must take off your hat and stop to tea, for I'm going to be all alone this evening. Brother Whitcomb's got to go home and 'tend a prayer-meeting, and pa's going over to Tim Ramsdell's to see his new-fangled corn-sheller. Do take pity on me, for the crickets are singing louder than ever to-night, and I shall be lonesome enough to die.'

"'Yes, I told Tim I'd drop over ter-night, though I don't believe nothin' in eny o' these new-fangled machines,' explained her father; 'n' of you'll stay with Matilda Jane I'll let Ethan harness up old Moll 'n' take you over ter the village by nine o'clock, or whenever you feel as of you must go.'

"'These melancholy autumn days, when everything in nature reminds us of our own sad decline, make us more prone than ever to seek the companionship of a congenial spirit,' remarked the minister, in his most solemn tones.

"His cheeks were more like the red, red rose, than usual, and he had brought as gifts to the object of his affection oranges and the Missionary Herald.

"Miss Matilda Jane was extremely unconscious and matter-of-fact, though her toilet bore marks of more than ordinary consideration. 'You'd better wait long enough to just taste a cup of tea, too, Brother Whitcomb,' said she. 'I won't be any time preparing it. The tea-kettle is ready to boil now. And if you are not there in time, can't one of the Deacons open the meeting?'

"He shook his head plaintively; 'We are too prone to shut our ears to the voice of duoty, too prone to follow our own inclinations 'n' stray away from the strait and narrow path. No, we must follow dooty, even though it leads us away from our dearest companions,' glancing with solemn fondness at Miss Matilda Jane."

"I wouldn't never 'a' hed a man in this world thet courted me jest as of he was exhortin' a sinner!" exclaims Mrs. Bragdon, warmly.

"He did not follow duty immediately, however," I resume, "but stood irresolute, with his hat in his hand, for a few moments, then concluded to follow Miss Matilda Jane into the kitchen instead; and, though he did not make his adieux to either Captain John or me, I supposed he was hastening toward home and the 'missionary meeting,' when, in the course of a half-hour or so, Miss Matilda Jane announced that tea was ready.

"'La! Brother Whitcomb went home, after all, did he?' inquired the lady, looking somewhat disturbed, I fancied. 'I thought he had decided to stay. Strange he didn't come out and say good-night.'

"'Why, didn't he?' said Captain John; 'he went out toward the kitchen, and that's the last I saw of him.'

"Miss Matilda Jane seemed slightly absent-minded for a moment or two, but soon recovered herself, and was as bright and talkative as ever. 'Now I'll make haste and get my work done up, and we'll have a good long evening together,' said she. 'Ethan wants to go to the store, so he has got the milking done already, and everything will be out of the way beautifully by half-past six.'

"The brightest of fires was blazing on the hearth, and we dispensed with a lamp in order to enjoy it to the fullest extent. It was a delightful evening. Miss Matilda Jane, who is a good story-teller, told me of all the quaint events which had ever happened in the old town. But the wind came up at length, the tree-boughs cracked weirdly outside, and we were disturbed by strange noises during the whole time.

"'Some one is certainly pounding on the back door,' I insisted more than once.

"'I hope you won't be scared, but folks have always said that this house is haunted,' said Miss Matilda Jane, cheerfully. 'It's nothing but the wind howling through the empty garret, though, and the rats tumbling in the walls. They do carry on outrageously when it grows quite still at night. It's their noise that you hear now.'

"'Impossible!' I said. 'Do let us be brave and open the back door.'

"'O, I'm not in the least afraid. Of course, I can't hear as distinctly as you do, but I'm pretty sure there is no one there.'

"We proceeded to the door at once, but found nothing but darkness and a stray apple-bough that was tapping, though not noisily, on the sill. The pounding still continued, however, and I was quite positive that I heard a voice, or voices, shouting from a distance, as if in distress.

"'O, that's nothing but the boys over in Squire Goodnow's barn. They're shelling corn over there, and make a terrible racket every evening. I can hear them sometimes myself, if I am hard of hearing,' said Matilda Jane when I assured her of this fact. 'Come, let us go into the sitting-room and sit down again and make ourselves comfortable. It's chilly away from the fire.'

"I looked over in the direction of the barn, and saw the yellow light of a lantern and moving figures through the wide-open door, and became more easy in my mind.

"But at half-past nine Ethan appeared on the scene, with open mouth and startled eyes. 'Who's that amakin' sich an all-fired pounding an' screeching in the suller, or in the dairy, or somewhere 'nuther?' he exclaimed, excitedly.

"'Well, I don't know but that the old house is haunted, sure enough,' said Miss Matilda Jane, starting to her feet. 'Miss Harris has been hearing queer noises all the evening. Let us take a lamp and see what we can find.'

"'I hain't no cuoward, but I wouldn't keer to see a spirit,' piped Ethan, shrinking into a corner.

"'Nonsense! spirits don't make such noises,' said his mistress, laughing.

"'My gun's all loaded, 'n' I guess I'll take it long with me,' said he, becoming somewhat reassured by her coolness.

"'Well, take it and come along,' said she, quickly. 'Miss Harris, I'm afraid you're scared,' turning to me. 'You'd better stay here by the fire; we shan't be gone long, 'tis likely.'

"But I preferred to be of the investigating party, and we all three started in solemn procession, guided by the light of the fitful kerosene. It was a long distance from the sitting-room to the back kitchen, and as we approached this dark and isolated region the pounding, which had commenced with a vengeance as soon as we had opened the dining-room door, became more and more distinct. Ethan shouldered his gun and looked darkly at every shadow.

"'Goodness! the sound comes from the dairy!' said Miss Matilda Jane, in a tragical whisper.

"'It's the parson, tew, by golly! That's his voice, though it's so kinder shaky 'n' funny,' said Ethan, rushing bravely and nimbly forward as an angry appeal to be let out reached our startled ears.

"'Why, he must have followed me there when I went after butter for supper, and I locked him in by mistake,' said Miss Matilda Jane, looking distressed and rather awe-stricken, but laughing at the same time in spite of herself. 'He said that he had something to say to me in private, I know, but pa was in such a squizzle for his supper that I forgot all about it afterward.'

"It is not consoling to have one's misery laughed at, so I discreetly remained in the background when the unfortunate gentleman emerged from his prison—which was like a veritable cell, stone floor and all. I could not distinguish the words which fell from his lips, but, as there were an abundance of them, uttered in by no means his usual smooth, drawling tone, I suppose they must have been more expressive than polite, for I heard Miss Matilda Jane say, with cool distinctness, after a little pause: 'Well, if you have got such a temper as this, you may as well go your own way, for all me. I've seen enough—more than enough—of you, sir.'

"'And if you haven't any more sense than this, I shall be very glad to do so, madam,' was the quick reply. 'Allow me to wish you good-night.'

"'Ethan, light your lantern and go with Mr. Whitcomb to the barn and help him harness his horse,' commanded the lady, turning to follow me, with stately dignity, to the sitting-room.'

"'N' he never come ag'in,'" says Mrs. Bragdon, whose face is all aglow with happy excitement. "I knowed all the time that they must 'a' hed some kind of a quarrel, 'n' I kin see jest exactly how 'twas now, as if I'd 'a' bin there myself. Proberbly he follered her into the dairy to pop the question—it's an orful retired place—'n' she's so dretful deef 'n' absent-minded that she didn't neither see nor hear him. She's 'most inconvenient spry-motioned, tew, fur such a person, 'n' I s'pose she come out 'n' looked him in 'fore he had time to think, he bein' kinder flustered-like, under the circumstances. I don't wonder nobody didn't hear him for so long, for that dairy is a mild away from the front part of the house, three steps down from the old back kitchen. Well, well, I hope Alfonso won't bring no more news ter-night, for I shan't sleep a wink as 'tis—I know I shan't; 'n' then it's kinder provokin' in such dull times to hear everything to once!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson, Manufacturing Chemists, 21 Platt St., New York:

Gentlemen:—For the past few years we have sold various brands of Porous Plasters. Physicians and the Public prefer Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster to all others. We consider them one of the very few reliable household remedies worthy of confidence. They are superior to all other Porous Plasters or Liniments for external use.

Benson's Capcine Plaster is a genuine Pharmaceutical product, of the highest order of merit, and so recognized by physicians and druggists.

You will be disappointed if you use cheap Plasters, Liniments, Pads or Electrical Magnetic toys.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

NERVOUS HEADACHE.—Dr. Oehlschlagger, of Danzig, says that he has found salicylate of sodium to be a remedy of great value in the treatment of nervous headache, especially if given in a dose of one gramme (gr. xv) in the beginning of an attack. It usually produces drowsiness, and after a few hours the patient wakes up refreshed and free from pain. It, however, often fails to produce this effect in cases dependent on anemia.

HOT WATER FOR THE HEART.—In a letter to The Lancet, Dr. A. Paggi records the following observation: He states that in Paris he saw a case in which, under the inhalation of chloroform, the heart ceased to beat, and artificial respiration for ten minutes failed to restore circulation, when Dr. Labbo dipped a large cloth in boiling water and applied it to the region of the heart, with the result of immediately restoring the action of that organ.

TO CURE CORNS.—Soak the feet for one-half hour in a solution of soda, and pare the corns as closely as possible; then apply a plaster of the following ingredients: Take of purified ammonia and yellow wax each two ounces and acetate of copper six drams; melt the first two ingredients together, and after removing them from the fire add the acetate of copper just as they grow cold; spread the ointment on a piece of soft leather or linen and place it on the corn, removing it in two weeks.

THE following remedy for the bite of a mad dog is recommended by one who has been bitten six times, and in every instance cured himself, he claims, by this method: Put a pound of salt in a quart of water, and bathe the wound thoroughly for about an hour; then bind dampened salt upon it, letting it remain an hour or so. This simple remedy is said by the author to be a sure cure. We have no personal knowledge of its value.

TAKING COLD.—It may be comforting to hear that we need not take cold if we do not want to; that taking cold depends mainly on the will. A very high medical authority so declares, and adds that we know very little of the forms of disease, even the commonest. Cold taking seems to be the result of a sufficient impression of cold to reduce the vital energies of nerve-centers presiding over the functions of special organs. It is easy to see then why a fit of sneezing rouses the centers, enabling them to resume work and avoid evil consequences.—Exchange.

SANITARY HINTS.—It is easier to keep one's health than to regain it when once lost. And yet on this point how careless and negligent some people are. Here are a few rules which will commend themselves at once to every one's common sense, and need but to be recalled to be more generally observed. Never lean with the back upon anything that is cold. Never begin a journey till the breakfast has been eaten. Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out into the cold air. Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered, and the chest also well protected. In sleeping in a cold room, establish the habit of breathing through the nose, and never with the mouth open. Never go to bed with cold or damp feet; always warm by a fire ten or fifteen minutes before going to bed. After exercise of any kind never ride in an open carriage or near the window of a car for a moment, for it is dangerous to health and even to life. When hoarse, speak as little as possible until it is recovered from, as the voice may be permanently lost, or difficulties of the throat be produced. Merely warm the back by the fire, and never continue keeping the back exposed to heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do otherwise is debilitating. When going from a warm atmosphere into a colder one, keep the mouth closed so that the air may be warmed by its passage through the nose before it reaches the lungs. Always avoid standing on the ice or snow, or where the person is exposed to a cold wind or draught. Keep the body in motion after any violent exercise while cooling off. An observance of these few simple rules will save many a doctor's bill, and not infrequently life itself.

Timely Help.

A grandfather, coming to read his paper, found that he had mislaid his spectacles, and thereupon declared, "I have lost my glasses somewhere and can't read the paper." A little 3½-year-old girl, desiring to assist him, answered: "G'an'pa, you go outside and look froo ze window, and I'll hold ze paper up so you can read it."

Romantic Marriage.

WATKINS—FOWNER—On the 17th inst., by the Rev. Samuel Shannon, Millard F. Watkins and Mary Catherine Fowner, both of Baltimore City, Md.

There is quite an interesting story connected with this announcement which is furnishing food for gossip among the fashionable residents of Northwest Baltimore, and which proves conclusively that the lot of a policeman, although hard at times, can be happy as that of any other man. The happy Benedict in the present instance is a well-known and popular officer of the Northwestern District, whose reputation for steadiness and close attention to duty is second to that of no other officer on the force. About one year ago he was appointed to the position he now occupies, and was detailed to work a beat on Pennsylvania avenue. Within a few doors of the point at which his beat ended, and where he generally met the Sergeant, lived Miss Katie Fowner, the daughter of a wealthy liquor dealer. Miss Katie, as she was known, although very young in years, had already several admirers, and not a few would have gladly taken her for better or worse. Officer Watkins passed the house every evening with his squad to go on duty, and, becoming attracted by the fresh and youthful countenance, obtained an introduction and cultivated the acquaintance when off duty. From the first Miss Katie seemed to like the officer's company, and it was not long before a mutual attachment sprang up between them, which has since ripened into deep and ardent love. All this time, though matters seemed to be progressing smoothly enough, the parents of the young lady objected to the visits of the officer, and their course of true love was destined not to run as smooth as they would have liked. The couple had no objection to waiting for a reasonable time, but matters were brought to a crisis when it became known that the parents were making arrangements to go West and take her with them.

Finding it impossible to effect their purpose in this way, they determined on a coup d'etat, which was well planned and successfully carried out last Sunday evening. Taking advantage of a time when her guardians were otherwise engaged, the young lady gathered together some clothing, of which she made a compact bundle, with the intention of taking it with her, but fearing that suspicion might be aroused, she abandoned this idea and quietly left her parental residence without it. It was nearly dark now, and her absence was not immediately discovered. At the next corner she was joined by her lover and his best man, Officer Hartzell, and the trio made all haste to the parsonage of the Emery M. E. Church. As soon as they arrived here the key was turned in the door for fear the parents might surmise their whereabouts and endeavor to prevent the marriage. Nothing, however, intervened, and within a few moments thereafter the Rev. Samuel Shannon pronounced the happy couple man and wife.

In the meantime the young lady was missed, and thinking that she had been taken to her lover's home, her father went to his house, but they had no knowledge of the couple's whereabouts. On his way back, however, he met the newly-wedded pair, who had just come from the parsonage. Unaware that his jurisdiction had ceased, the father endeavored to get his daughter to go home with him, but to this her husband strenuously objected, claiming his right as a husband to take care of his wife. To this the father would not listen, and a scene was imminent, when the husband, exercising his prerogative as an officer, arrested Mr. Fowner, and took him to the Northwestern Station. He charged him with disturbing the public peace by interfering with himself and wife, but said that he did not desire to press the charge if left to go his way in peace. Capt. Earhart decided then to dismiss the case, but requested Mr. Fowner to remain there for a few minutes until the others had departed. This he accordingly did, and the newly-married pair went on their way rejoicing, and the father returned home. Thus the matter now stands. It is thought, however, that Mrs. Watkins' parents will finally relent, and that all will be forgiven.—Baltimore special to St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Evil Results of Smoking.

My debut as a smoker was like everybody's. My first pipe made me very ill, and it was only by degrees that I managed to become a third-rate smoker—that is, I disposed of eight or ten pipes a day without inconvenience. But whenever I exceeded that average I suffered from violent sick-headaches, ushered in by indistinctness of vison and numbness of one side of the face, the tongue and one arm, most often on the left side. These preliminary symptoms lasted about ten minutes, after which the headache came on in full force. The most refractory organ, however, was my stomach. After having smoked too much I used to experience the symptoms known as pyrosis or heartburn to a very trying extent, though as any alkaline water speedily caused these phenomena to vanish I did not care to give up my tobacco.

About a ... ago, having smoked for some ... more than usual, I suddenly found myself affected by a peculiar and terrific pain over the region of the heart; in short, I had a violent attack of angina pectoris. It put a stop to my smoking, as, though I have since tried once or twice, I have always found my cigar or pipe detestable, and, to sum up, am radically converted. I did not wish to discuss scientifically the nicotinic origin of my suffering, but am sure they all sprang from the same cause—excessive use of tobacco. Degeneration of the cardiac muscle is often caused by tobacco. So long as the rest of his organism remains in good working order the smoker only experiences intermittent palpitation, and the grave injury done the heart remains unperceived until some trifling cause brings into relief the irremediable disorders produced by the prolonged use of tobacco.—Dr. Deschamps, in Galignani.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE—WHEREAS, Wm. M. Steele and Clarinda P. Steele, his wife, of the city of Janesville, Rock county, Wisconsin, mortgagors, duly executed and delivered to George M. Steele, mortgagee, a mortgage bearing date February 8th, 1881, which was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, of the county of Rock, in the State of Wisconsin, on the 25th day of February, 1881, at three o'clock in the afternoon, in Volume 12 of mortgages, at page 206, on which mortgage there is due and unpaid at the date hereof the sum of fourteen hundred and twenty ($1420) dollars principal, and the further sum of eight hundred and seventy-eight and 3-100 ($878.03) dollars interest, at 7 per cent, making a total of twenty-two hundred and ninety-eight 3-100 ($2298.03 100) dollars due and unpaid upon the said mortgage at date hereof. And

WHEREAS, Default has been made in the payment of the debt secured by the said mortgage according to the condition thereof as set forth in said mortgage and no action has been commenced to recover the debt secured by the said mortgage or any part thereof. And

WHEREAS, The said mortgage and the debt secured thereby were afterwards, to-wit on 17th day of June, 1882, by an instrument in writing bearing date June 17, 1882, for a valuable consideration by said mortgagor, George M. Steele, duly assigned to Walter L. Steele, of Tigerton, Wisconsin, who is now the owner and holder thereof; and the said assignment duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said Rock County, at 8 o'clock and fifty-five minutes in the forenoon of July 1, 1882, in Vol. 40 of Miscellany, page 383. Now therefore, notice is hereby given that in pursuance of the Statute in such cases made and provided, and by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged premises hereinafter described, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to raise the sum of money necessary to satisfy the amount due on the said mortgage at the date of this notice of sale, with interest and the costs and expenses allowed by law, at public auction to the highest bidder On Wednesday, the 23rd day of August, A. D. 1882, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, on the sidewalk in front of the Postoffice building, at the city of Janesville, in the said County of Rock, State of Wisconsin, by the Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff of said county.

The following is a description of the mortgaged premises, so as aforesaid to be sold substantially as they are contained in the said mortgage: A part of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section thirty-five (35) in town three (3) north range twelve (12) east, county of Rock, State of Wisconsin, comprising ten (10) acres of land and bounded as follows: beginning at the northwest corner of land once owned by O. P. Robinson, thence south sixty six and two-thirds (66⅔) rods to land once owned by M. A. Lovejoy, thence west twenty-four (24) rods, thence north sixty-six and two-thirds (66⅔) rods, thence east twenty-four rods (24) rods to place of beginning, being the premises owned and occupied by the late Wm. M. Steele at the time of his death.—Dated July 1st, 1882.

Brefiets.

—Mr. R. T. Powell, of the town of Fulton, is reported very ill and not expected to live.

—Mr. Abram Smith, of the Rockford Gazette, made the Gazette a friendly call to-day.

—Mrs. C. M. Boys started this morning for New York. She will be absent about three weeks.

—Mr. P. J. Clawson, district attorney of Green county, is in the city, to-day, on business.

—Mr. Ed. Titcomb came up from Harvard to-day, to attend Prof. C. G. Titcomb's recital to-night.

—Dr. J. H. Warren left to-day for Miles City on the Northern Pacific, where he has a stage route to Deadwood.

—Dr. D. H. Williams, who has been connected with the Mercy Hospital, Chicago, is in the city, visiting friends and relatives.

—Mr. Charles G. Short, representing the Faller and Warren Co., of Chicago is in the city, and thinks of remaining here permanently.

—The Concordia pic-nic at Wheeler's grove, will take place to-morrow. No better opportunity could be afforded for unrestrained enjoyment.

—The Hon. Charles G. Williams left for Chicago to-day, but will return before Wednesday, when he will leave to join the Gubernatorial party on an excursion to Winnepeg.

—Mr. E. A. Burdick, son of Z. P. Burdick, who has been in one of the government offices at Washington, for sometime has been promoted from a $1400 clerkship to one with a salary of $1800.

—Whiteley's redramatization of the "Hidden Hand" is said to be superior to any former production of Mrs. Southworth's story, and the characters are well represented by talented artists. Give them a call Wednesday night.

—The case of the State against Howard Venable, charged with the larceny of $30 from Adam Smith, was dismissed in the Municipal Court to-day, for want of jurisdiction, the offense having been committed in Beloit.

—The members of the Broom Brigade have had their photographs taken in uniform and grouped. The Gazette office and a vacant space over the city editor's desk needs just such an ornament as one of these b[illegible] one would make.

—The States Attorney Combination will show here in Myers' opera house, tomorrow night. The company is represented a fine one, and produce a fine play. John Dillon, the leading man, is too well known here to require any introduction.

—Mr. L. F. McLean, secretary of the Beloit Horse Fair and Trotting Association, called at the Gazette office to-day. Mr. McLean says that there will be a number of fast trotters at the approaching meeting, some of them having records below 20.

—The North Adams (Massachutts) Transcript, of the 17th instant, contains the following in regard to the little daughter of Mr. S. E. Parker, who at one time was superintendent of the shoe factory here: "A little daughter of S. E. Parker, died Saturday, after a few days' illness with summer trouble. The loss of their only little one is a severe blow to Mr. and Mrs. Parker.

—A false impression has been formed by a great many of Col. Burr Robbins' connection with the recent seizure of the "Big United States" Show. The circus was seized on attachments sued out by other parties, and Col. Robbins, by virtue of his holding a chattel mortgage on the property, was made a co-defendant. He did not instigate the seizure, and would have been better pleased had the show continued its route.

—The farmers in the neighborhood of Rock Prairie have experienced a sore disappointment in their spring wheat. The crop had the appearance of being a comparatively good one, until they began to stack it, when the discovery was made that the berry had shrunk into almost nothing, and would not pay for the threshing. The farmers are therefore burning it in the shock. Mr. David Barlass burned forty acres.

—The friends of Professor Bishoff will be interested in the following from the Fond du Lac Commonwealth: "Dr. J. W. Bishoff, the eminent organist of the First Congregational church of Washington, D. C., who was recently offered thd position of head organist in Grace church, N. Y., is still in the city. Some talk is heard of an organ concert, which, with Mr. Bishoff as an attraction, would not fail of success."

—Dr. William Horne, who has been absent in the South for a long time, returned to the city on Saturday. He has been located in Mobile, Ala., and expresses himself as so well pleased that he will return at the approach of cold weather, having left there to avoid the contingency of yellow fever. Dr. Horne brought up some fine specimens of tropical fruits, peaches, unripe oranges and pomegranates, and presented the Gazette with samples.

—Arrangements are being made by the Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Patrick's church, to give an ice cream festival, on Tuesday evening, August 29th. Anderson's full band will be in attendance at Apollo hall, to furnish music to those desiring to engage in dancing, and ice cream and cake will be served in Lappin's Music hall. The party promises to be an enjoyable one, and all wishing to spend the evening pleasantly, should give the young ladies a call. Tickets, 75 cents.

A GRAVE JOKE.

The Death of a Gray Mare Produces Unusual Excitement

The telephone has been the cause of numerous misunderstandings, and has excited more profanity, perhaps, than any other one thing in the world, but probably there never was more excitement created by a misunderstood telephonic communication than one which went over the wires yesterday. A veterinary surgeon, desiring to apprise Mr. J. H. Kinney of the death of a horse, went to the 'phone rang the bell, and yelled:

"Hello! Hello!"

"Hello!" came back.

"That Kinney?"

"What's that?"

"Br-r-rr-r-r."

"Well, what is it?"

"Bll Gll-r-ssh—is it?"

"Can't hear you—talk louder."

"Immediately the news spread that the ex-mayor had shuffled off this mortal coil, and as the telephone wouldn't work any more, messengers were sent out to discover which one of the former officials it was.

Was it Ex-mayor Merrill or was it Mr. Lovejoy?

No one knew, but everybody became interested. The unfortunate official was soon on the way to the cemetery, and a few had him buried, with one or to insisting that the funeral had been a secret.

The unknown ex-city father had been murdered, poisoned, stabbed, riddled with bullets, drowned, committed suicide, three or four times, was sunstruck, and had gone through an endless catalogue of deaths before noon.

A visit to all the living representatives of the mayorality disclosed the welcome fact, that they were well. Then a posse armed with walking sticks and bare roasting ear cobs, was organized to lynch the heartless perpetrator of the hoax. The veterinary man was called up on the 'phone as soon as his identity was ascertained, and in being told to prepare for the grave, was asked why he circulated such a cruel joke.

The surgeon who was then examining a horse afflicted with a sort of too much cucumbers pain, retorted in another question for information.

"Why did you say the ex-Mayor was dead?"

"Ex-Mayor be blanked. What do you blank fools want? I said Kinney's gray mare was dead."

Nearly a Miracle.

E. Asenith Hall, Binghamton, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for several months with a dull pain through left lung and shoulders. I lost my spirits, appetite, and color, and could with difficulty keep up all day. My mother procured some BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS; I took them as directed, and have felt no pain since first week after using them, and am now quite well. Price $1.00.

Excursion Amusements.

The excursion to Milwaukee yesterday under the auspices of the Germania Society, of Rockford, was a gratifying success to the projectors, and a source of pleasure to the crowd who participated. About one hundred Janesville people attended, the train taking a car from here. On arriving in Milwaukee the excursionists were met by a band of music, and escorted to Schlitz' park, where the Milwaukee Musicians' Union held a festival. The pretty grounds were well filled during the day and evening, and the music furnished by Ch. Bach's military band assisted by members of the union, was exceptionally fine. The selections were excellent, and their rendition elicited continued applause. Cornet solos by Mr. Gewert, a recent importation of Prof Bach, were most artistically rendered. Mr. Gewert is an extraordinary cornetist. The return home, was not quite so pleasant to the majority as it might have been, had not the Milwaukee beer indulged in asserted itself. There were a number of quarrels and one or two fights, but these occurred in other cars than the one occupied by the Janesville representation. There were only two or three of the Janesville passengers who exhibited any signs of intoxication and that of the harmless, fun-making order. A few rowdies from Rockford and Beloit, who succeeded in getting treated to a drunken degree, attempted to run things their own way, and insulted some ladies in the car reserved for the Janesville delegation. They were promptly ejected, and would have been unmercifully whipped but for the coolness and managing ability of Mr. John Bauman, who superintended affairs in the home car. A couple of hoodlums hailing from either Rockford or Beloit entered the car, armed with slung-shots and billies, but before they had an opportunity to use them, the roughs were disarmed and shoved into their own cars.

Good beer was so new a thing to these bum denizens of Rockford and Beloit, that their little brains became so addled, they imagined themselves as having already attained the pinnacle of their ambition—sixteenth class bums.

A Movable Jail.

Constable Jones of Clinton was placed in a very annoying quandary yesterday, by an unforseen occurence growing out, of the want of a "lockup" in Clinton. He arrested on Saturday evening two young men who lived not very far from the town in a southwesterly direction for being drunk, and as he frequently does, incarcerated them in a freight car which the agent said would not be used just then. Sometime towards early morning, a train came along and coupled on to the two cars. The prisoners, of course, went with car, and Jones is now wondering if he will get them back. The young men also, are doubtless objecting most strenuously to their enforced trip in a railroad jail.

THE BALTIMORE ORIOLE.

Perfecting a Programme of the most Unique and Brilliant Character' Participation of King Rex, Momus, Mystic Krewe, Veiled Prophets and other noted Mystic Organizations.

The oriole festivities next month in Baltimore promises a programme that in unique and brilliant features has never been paralleled before in the country. Indeed it may be said that "promise" is hardly a strong enough word, as preparations have been so far completed as to insure a success that will surprise visitors and residents alike. An enormous amount of work has been completed, and on two different times the building where the pageant is being constructed, has had to be greatly enlarged. The experience Baltimore had last year in the way of pageants will be profited by this year to a striking extent. Instead of contracting with any one man for its production and construction, it has been entirely in the hands of a committee of Baltimore citizens—active and energetic men—who have given the greater portion of their time to the work for months past. The general manager is a gentleman of very large experience in Southern cities in designing, perfecting and placing upon the streets night displays of this character. With him have been associated artists also of large experience in the construction, painting and decorating of floats, and the work already accomplished is a surprise even to those intimately connected with it.

The pageant is upon Thursday night, September 14th, and the Oriole portion of it will consist of two grand divisions, the most extensive display of the kind ever attempted by any one organization in the United States.

The first division of the pageant will be a memorable one, as it will display representative floats of the oldest and most famous of the Mystic Organizations of the country. Indeed the division will include Tableaux Cars by all the Mystic Organizations of the South and West. There will be Rex and his Court from New Orleans, Comus and his Crewe, Momus and his Knights, and the Knights of Proteus, all of New Orleans. The Veiled Prophets of St. Louis; the Memphii, of Memphis; Momus and his Knights, of Galveston; the Cowbellians, Infant Myths and Strikers, of Mobile.

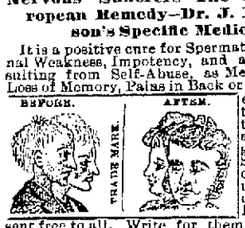

The long experience that these organizations have had in displays of this character, and the brilliant reputation they hold all over the country for marvelous effects, will be more than eclipsed in Baltimore next month, as while the competition among them to make the grandest display is of the most friendly nature, still they will all strive to outdo one another in gorgeous effects. The festivities open on Tuesday, the 12th, with a military parade, followed by a competitive trial, which will undoubtedly prove one of the most notable of military events. The competitive trial is open to all States, and already a number of acceptances received from crack organizations assures a competition which cannot but prove of the liveliest interest. The second day's festivities will be of a unique and striking description, embracing as they will the reception of Cecilius, Lord of Baltimore, after an absence of 250 years. King Charles the First gave to Cecilius all the territory now embraced in the State of Maryland, as well as much of that embraced in the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia. Lord Baltimore will arrive on one of the largest steamers at the foot of Broadway, and will be received by a pageant as novel as it will be brilliant. All the local military as well as from sixteen to eighteen visiting companies will participate as will also all the uniformed societies of the city, the Fire and Police Departments, and all municipal organizations. The immediate body guard of Lord Baltimore will be a cavalcade of mounted courtiers superbly mounted, costumed and all closely masked. With Cecilius, will be King Rex, Comus, Momus, Memphii, Veiled Prophets and other high dignitaries. The leading business houses of the city will display representative tableaux, and the parade upon the whole will be one long to be remembered.

Every preparation has been made for the accommodation of visitors to Baltimore upon this occasion and she will spread herself as never before. There is a full and hearty recognition of the fact that last year's celebration was not strictly a success and therefore it may be depended upon that this year's festivities will exceed the anticipations of the most enthusiastic.

The B. & O. R. R. has with its accustomed enterprise and liberality made a remarkably low rate from all stations on its main line, divisions and branches. The details for the prompt and rapid transit of the immense number of people who will go over the road to Baltimore have all been perfected and special trains will be run and no trouble deemed too great to insure the satisfaction of all parties.

AN ITEM
OF

Ladies:

We take pleasure in presenting to you an elegant line of ladies' underwear consisting of night robes, skirts, chemise, &c., &c.

Wherever they have been introduced they become the ladies' favorite, as an examination will convince the most skeptical that they are the best and most serviceable under garments ever placed before the public. These garments are unequalled in material, workmanship and design.

Ladies in quest of anything in this line will profit by calling at

J. M. BOSTWICK & SONS',
White Front Store 25 Main Street.

GENERAL
GOODS!

J. M. Bostwick & Sons.

Propose to give the people of Janesville and Rock county a little benefit in the way of cheap goods that seldom occurs. Having a large stock on hand of all kinds of Merchandise, instead of shipping to other points and giving the bargains to out side parties, we are going to give the benefit of the sale at home.

10 cases of all kinds of the best Prints, Cocheco, Merrimacs, Spragues, Allen and a dozen other makes, 16 to 20 yards for a dollar.

The celebrated Plaid Dress Goods that we have been selling for one shilling to 20 cents, we will put the whole pile on the counter at 10 cents per yard.

100 dozen Ladies' Hose that have been selling from one shilling to fifteen cents, we will sell for 10 cents.

1000 Gross Buttons at 2½ cents per dozen. This, for a small item, is the biggest bargain in the stock.

500 yards Thread for five cents a spool, for basting and cheap purposes this is the cheapest known.

Ladies' Jackets and Dolmans at prime cost. We sell a good Jacket, all-wool, from two to three dollars—they are cheap.

Lawns and Cambries in large varieties and will be sold cheap.

50 pieces Black Lace Bunting, all wool, at two shillings—this is very cheap.

50 pieces Plain Navy Bunting, 44-inches wide, at 30 cents—has been sold as high as 75 cents—this is a great bargain.

200 pieces of all kinds of Dress Goods, sold at prices that will astonish all. And in fact every kind of goods sold cheap to reduce the stock to prepare for fall trade. People buying or looking for goods will save money and time by calling upon us

Respectfully Yours,

J. M BOSTWICK & SONS.

We have 10 bales of Brown Sheeting to close at 4 cents per yard; for many uses this is just as good as 7 or 8 cent goods
